Prologue

*L*ook inside, examine your thoughts, observe your own experiences. INTROSPECT. This year the Spotlight staff chooses as its theme Introspection so that we as students, but more importantly as individuals, may take a closer look at ourselves.

We've waited four years for graduation to become a reality. Now that it's here we are happy and proud of our achievements, but perhaps at the same time unsure of ourselves. We are leaving things that are familiar to us. The friend who helped us with chemistry, the friends we traveled to school with, the teacher who simplified math, the teacher who showed a special interest in us.

Graduation is bittersweet. We're sad to leave the comforts of security, yet we're anxious to put to use the foundations that Julia Richman has given us. We must take one last look at ourselves here and then move on.

Observe your own experiences.

Richman

In June 1972 it was a big joke. Since then, three serious fires have endangered every student at Julia Richman. These fires did considerable damage to three very important assets of our school: the swimming pool, the auditorium and the home economics room. Students were disturbed in the middle of their classes and forced to go outside (once in the bitter cold) to await the end of the fire. Incidents like these upset both students and faculty, but when Julia Richman's students are involved in constructive things, it is a pleasure to see.

Our Student Happening last June, took place with almost everyone participating. Students painted murals which were used to decorate Julia Richman's halls. The Bluebird staff sold their literary magazine to passers-by. Spark sold its own magazine and also sponsored a cake sale. Students and teachers enjoyed talking to people on the street and telling them about our school. We will all look back upon this as a beautiful and wonderful experience.

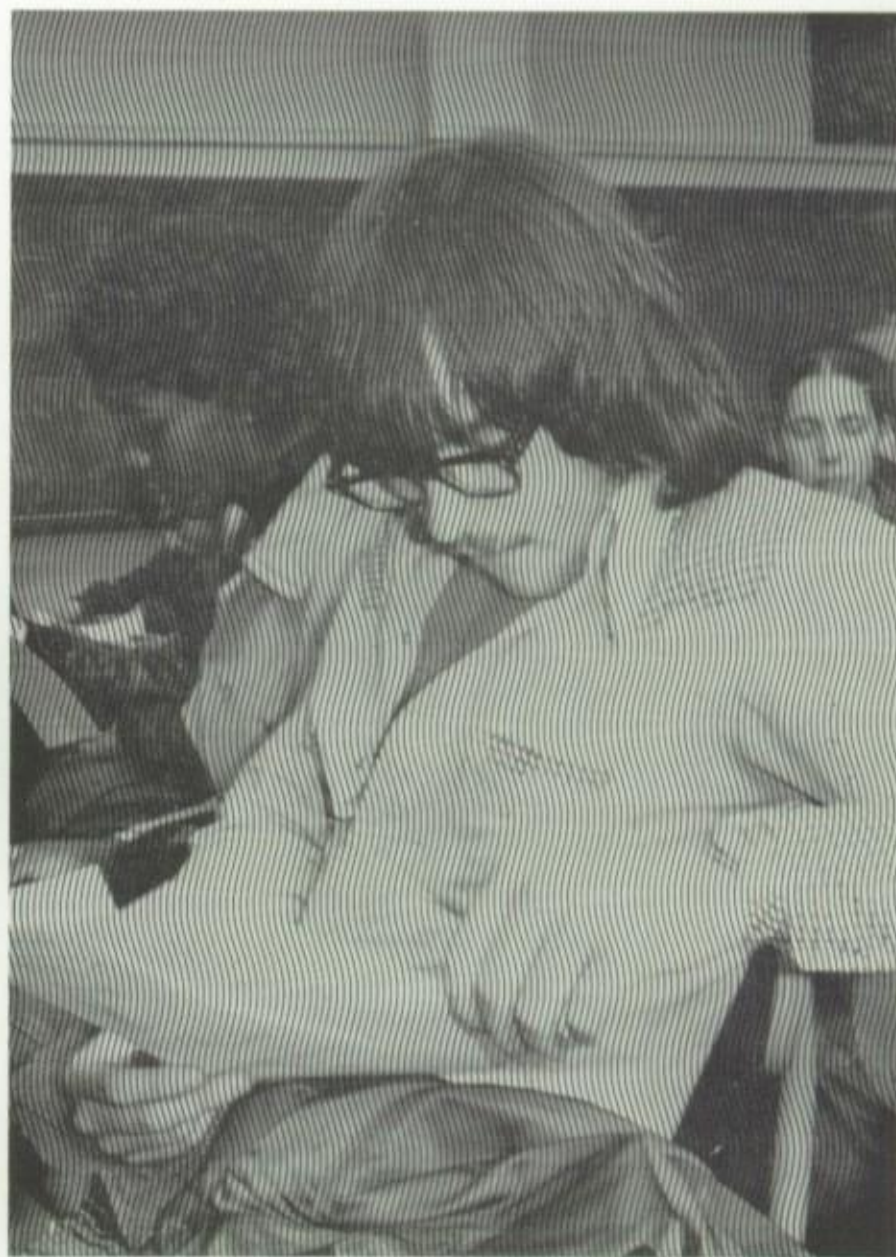

Happenings

Mr. Jefferson explains admission requirements.

Bob Jefferson and other representatives of City University visited Julia Richman's juniors and seniors in the fall term. Mr. Jefferson detailed the workings of City University. He spoke of admission requirements and various programs that City University offers. He included facts concerning financial aid and open enrollment. Interested students received applications to City University. Most importantly they were advised of the opportunities City University offers to high school students.

After hearing Mr. Jefferson speak, many students wanted to attend a City University School for a day. An open house at City College was organized by the College Bound program and Miss Levy. Fifty students attended what turned out to be a very confusing trip. It took a great deal of time for students to get on crowded buses. The driver had trouble finding City College. Upon arriving at the college there were difficulties in locating the conference. Even though this was a grueling experience, many students still applied and will be attending City University in the fall.

Richman Rocks with Rhythm

Richmanites tune in to The Decisions.

The Decisions entertained Richman students at a special assembly sponsored by the G.O. on December 3, 1973. The group sang various popular songs and danced to their own music. Students expressed much enthusiasm during this assembly. Girls screamed and many students danced in the aisles. Two members of The Decisions, Charles King and Donald Blue, are Richman students.

The concert was a delight to both teachers and students. It brought a little music into our routine school day.

The Human Relations class, conducted by Mrs. Dory Davidson, consists of both teachers and students. The course focuses on the relationships between members of the group through the understanding of ethnicity. It helps teachers become more sensitive to the needs and moods of their students. Seniors who volunteered to join the class not only received credit, but had an opportunity to air their opinions and get to know faculty members on a more personal level. Social issues were the center of discussions which made this experience very enlightening.

Talent Unlimited

After most of us have finished our classes another group of students begin theirs. These are the students enrolled in Talent Unlimited, a program designed to train talented young adults for the performing arts. The program is headed by Mr. John Motley. Students study drama, dance, singing and acting with professionals from each of these areas. They have performed at Harvard, Yale and Gracie Mansion. However, the most exciting aspect of the program is the opportunity for selected artists to travel to Paris for a special performance.

Most of the S.G.O funds are used to sponsor student clubs and athletic activities. However, an apparently apathetic attitude on the part of the students limited the size and number of clubs this year. Due to this indifference we had only ten clubs accommodating only a very small percentage of the four thousand students at Julia Richman.

That's not a very impressive statistic, but it can be easily changed. It's up to the students to do so. Students should have more involvement with their school. If you have suggestions contact your student government representative or an S.G.O. officer. Remember, Richman is what you make it. Get involved.

The S.G.O. is a student-run organization whose purposes are to provide activities and to assist clubs. This year we had our first Toy Drive for the children at Metropolitan Hospital. Students helped by donating toys. The S.G.O. had another first—a Christmas tree in the cafeteria made possible by student donations. The S.G.O. also sponsored a raffle to raise money that would assist clubs.

Acting as a combined force, the Senior Officers strived to achieve several objectives. The officers, with the support of Senior Captains, planned a successful Talent Show. The proceeds of this function were donated to the Fortune Society. The Senior Class also planned a prom at the Belmont Hotel. Unfortunately this event never materialized, partly because of the expense involved and partly because of general apathy among seniors. Those who were involved in senior activities had the gratifying experiences of accomplishment and leadership.

This year's small but dedicated staff attempted to rejuvenate Spotlight. Our advertising campaign was rather unsuccessful, but we were aided financially by many faculty supporters. These funds were used for the incorporation of graphics and color tints throughout the book.

There were times we felt ready to give up, but with constant encouragement from Mrs. Deena Davis, our adviser, we managed to meet all of our deadlines. The long hours that we spent working on Spotlight 1974 proved worthwhile to us. We hope you share our enthusiasm.

Stefanie Gold and Louis Desmond discuss photography schedule.

Vicki Howard contemplates tomorrow's deadline.

For the past two years Bluebird, Julia Richman's literary and art magazine, has been published in poster form. The 1972 issue won first prize at the Columbia University competition. This inspired the staff to continue its innovative work. This year Bluebird is again published in the form of posters—twelve—with the additional advantage of having a monthly calendar on each poster. Advisers, Mrs. Jean Emeson and Mr. Walter Hickens, are pleased with the work of their staff and the enthusiastic response of the student body.

Due to the overwhelming effects of the school budget cut, the Richman News was forced to struggle through another year. Only two issues were professionally printed. Supplementary issues were mimeographed. Despite this inconvenience, the staff did its best to supply the student body with practical information concerning school activities and special programs. "Unless there is a sizable increase in funds for next year, the future of the Richman News is in serious jeopardy," predicts staff adviser, Mr. William Hall.

This year the Leaders sponsored a Girls' Olympics which gave the women at Richman an opportunity to compete in athletic events. Many students participated in this activity. Trophies and chevrons were awarded to the winners of the competitions. The Leaders also sponsored a raffle to raise funds for their annual Leaders trip.

Spark!!

Spark is a group dynamics club headed by Mr. Ron Austin. The original purpose of the club was to provide counseling for students troubled by drugs. This caught on and in time more and more students came to Spark not just for help, but for companionship.

In Spark meetings students discuss any topics they choose to bring up. If someone is troubled about something it will usually come out in the course of a meeting and, hopefully, the person will feel better. The Spark group sponsors bazaars to raise money. They also go on several weekend trips to Connecticut during the year.

Julia Richman had a conglomeration of successful team activities in the 1973-74 seasons. The teams are supported financially by the S.G.O. Team members have proven themselves to be enthusiastic and dedicated sportsmen and sportswomen. To accomodate a rise in student involvement, a new junior varsity football team was organized.

There is one major flaw in our sports program, a lack of support from the general student body. Football games had almost no representatives from Richman in the stands to cheer the team. Basketball games had a larger crowd, but still a very small percentage of the total student body. These teams represent Julia Richman in league competition. It is a sad comment that hardly any one is around to applaud their victories and to support them, even in defeat.

Larry Guinyard gets close to cheerleader Zola Hill.

Cheerleaders

The cheerleaders are the morale boosters of the football and basketball teams. This group of enthusiastic girls are determined to show that there are people here who do actively support our teams. Their precisioned and rhythmic cheers are the result of many hours of practice after school.

Richman saw its best and most improved football team since its formation three years ago this season. "Despite the losing record, the season as a whole was a success," said Coach Ollie Colvin. Besides bringing us our first two wins, we also achieved our best record in the team's brief history of 2-5-1.

"Next year our goals are set for a 500 record because the addition of the Junior Varsity has enabled the younger students to acquire the experience necessary to go forward and build a stronger Varsity team," said assistant coach, Gabriel Romero.

Rockets

Richman

The performance of this year's varsity basketball team was one of excitement and both physical and intellectual force. Team spirit and school support were the reinforcements that led to the team's sixteen victories.

One of the most exciting, yet disappointing games was the divisional play-offs: Richman vs. Adlai Stevenson. Richman's Rockets, with a seventeen point lead in the fourth quarter, were up against some strategic competition. The sly Stevenson team took the lead to win the game by only two baskets. Asked how he felt about the loss, Coach Michael Klimoski commented, "It hurts, but we know that we are right there on top."

Among the best senior players of this season were Robert Wilson, who made all-conference, and Charles Brunson, who received an honorable mention. All in all, Richman's Rockets were without question very strong and extremely good. The coaches look forward to another successful season next year when the Manhattan-Brooklyn B Division Championship junior varsity team moves up to the varsity league.

Bowlers an Strike

The bowling team completed an excellent season. Out of a twelve game schedule our team compiled an 11-1 record, the lone defeat being at the hands of a strong team from Art and Design. This loss was of little consequence though, as Richman's bowlers went on to meet Stuyvesant in the quarter-finals at Madison Square Garden. Up by thirty pins at the end of four frames, bad luck from tough splits and good clutch bowling by Stuyvesant brought our opponents a close victory.

Coach Ron Austin believes that we will see another strong year in our next season. We are only losing one player to graduation and new bowlers will be recruited to a winning team.

This new trend towards electives is geared to meet the varied interests of Richman students.

Headed by Mr. Louis Santiago, the Mini School offers students an opportunity to attend smaller, more individualized classes. Students are given the responsibility for developing and implementing rules and regulations of some of the school's policy.

The school has a program affiliated with the Federal Trade Commission. Students spend one morning a week at a federal building where they receive consumer education training. There are also educational field trips to places such as the Stock Exchange, Black Expo, Riverside Church and community colleges. Both students and staff agree that this is a fulfilling educational alternative.

The English Department offers the largest selection of electives for junior and senior students. Although every student is required to take eight terms of English, students can now choose specialized courses that appeal to their individual interests.

This year we had the chance to study the occult, discuss women's lib, delve into mythology, study the Bible and learn "How to Win Friends and Influence People." These are only a few of the electives offered.

College Bound Fights Back

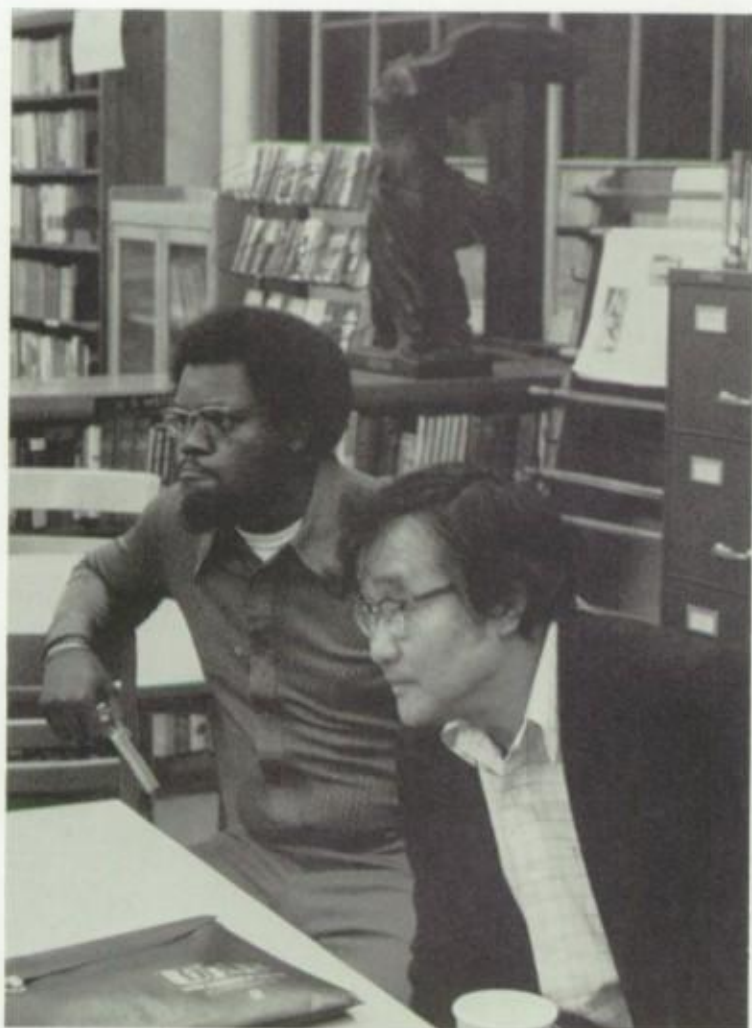

In addition to the usual tasks of counseling and education, this year the College Bound office was busy working toward the restoration of the original College Bound program. The program had been threatened by budget cuts and new state guidelines. A committee for the Restoration of the College Bound Program met with local, state and national politicians. Julia Richman was represented on this committee by Henrietta Gilbert, Joji Konoshima, Jean Emeson, Isabel Byron and William Freeman, parent of a college bound student.

The Medical Technology program is a two year course that prepares students for careers in laboratory technology. Each student must take one year of chemistry and one year of laboratory work, mainly in biology. The laboratory work consists of hematology (blood analysis), urinalysis and bacteriology.

Students in the program have small classes. A double period of science allows the teacher to give individualized instruction. It also promotes personal rapport between student and teacher and an opportunity for counseling. Mrs. Sherry Roth and Mrs. Sharon Weiss supervise the program and assist students in vocational training.

Self-Expression

Academic subjects seem to play the central role in our high school years, yet there are outlets for us where we can express ourselves more personally. The Art Department, headed by Mr. Stanley Marlin, gives Richman students an opportunity to develop their creative abilities.

Mr. Walter Hickens models an African gown during class trip to a local African store.

In addition to the required art class, students may choose several electives, such as Sculpture, Ceramics and Painting. Mr. Hickens teaches Ceramics and Sculpture. Ceramic students learn how to create bowls, vases and other items from unformed clay. Sculpture classes work from live models, creating their own masterpieces. The Art Department provides the necessary stimulation and instruction that often makes an artist out of an average student.

Rosilyn Parker, in rolled-up sleeves, begins work on a bowl.

Nilsa Vazquez puts finishing touches on a large vase.

Future Nurses Capped

Maritza Vega is congratulated by Mrs. Mavis Swire at Capping ceremony.

Richman's Nursing Department offers an in depth study program for those interested in a nursing career. The Nursing Program was formed in 1954 to give students a training program. Since then it has incorporated a nursery school where students can gain experience working with children. Students also gain experience while working in hospitals during their senior year. This program has been so successful that almost one hundred per cent of the students have gone on to college.

ALBUM

Now
when I look at US

I see beautiful images of demi-gods
dancing
in the sun.

Once separate entities sway vibrantly
and emerge
as a single force.

We are one
in spirit,

our souls
are combined.

We stretch toward
new horizons,

Growing like wild flowers in desert lands
ready to take on new forms
shapes
new dimensions . . .
